The Community Foundation of the Lowcountry

You just might be amazed at this collection of sculptures on display through the end of the year at Honey Horn.

The Community Foundation of the Lowcountry is pleased to welcome visitors to the inaugural Public Art Exhibition on Hilton Head Island! Selected from a field of more than 300 entries, these 20 outdoor sculptures from all over the country add an additional element to the activities that occur on the island in the fall. And our host location of the Coastal Discovery Museum at Honey Horn could not be a more perfect setting.

Through December 31, guests can enjoy the large-scale pieces by leisurely strolling the grounds or participating in a docent-led tour. The sculptures are created in a variety of mediums from aluminum to wood, bronze to marble, and represent a variety of styles from the literal to the abstract.
